B. M. Piatt, U. S. A., gives the following account of the wounding of Gen. Sickies at the

was within a few feet of Gen. Sickles when he received the wound by which he lost his leg. When our command fell back after being relieved by General Sykes, I hast ned to find General De Trobriand, and seeing a knot of officers near the brick house into which Gen. Sickles was so soon to be taken, I rode up to see if he (De Trobriand) was among them. The knot of officers proved to be Gen. Sickies and his staff. I saluted him and was just ask ing for Gen. De Trobriand, when a terrific explosion seemed to shake the very earth. This was instantly followed by another equally stunning, and the horses all began to jump. I instantly noticed that Gen. Sickles' pants and drawers at the knee were tern clear off to the leg, which was swinging loose. The jumping of the horse was fortunate for him, as he turned just in time for him to alight on the upper side of the slope of the hill. As he attempted to dismount he seemed to lose strength, and half fell to the ground. He was very pale, and evidently in fearful pain, as he exclaimed excitedly, "Quick! quick, get something and tie it up before I bleed to death." These were his exact words, and I never shall forget the scene as long as I live, for we all loved Gen. Sickles, who commanded our corps. He was carried from the field to the house I have mentioned, coolly emoking a cigar, quietly remarking to a Cathone priest, a chapiain to one of the regiments in his command, whose name I regret that I do not remember, but was fearlessly administering to the dying and wounded, in spite of the balls which whistled around him: "Man proposes and God disposes." His leg was amputated in less than half an hour after

THE GLASS-GHOST IN PORTSMOUTH.-Crowds from our city continue to visit Pertsmouth for the purpose of viewing the "lady and child" in one of the windows of Dr. Bilisoly's residence on High and Diawiddie streets, and which for some weeks has been the sensation in our sister city. There is no question of doubt as to the representation, and it is worth a visit. People from all sections of the surrounding country, and strangers arriving on the various steamship and railroad lines, who stop over for any time, are sure to call. At all hours of the day a crowd is present. In company with other members of the press, we made our call yesterday and viewed the spectacle. It represents the head and bust of a female, with a child resting on her shoulder. Her features are distinct, perfect, and somewhat beautiful, reminding one of faces seen in court pictures of the last century, the hair arranged a la pompadour. The features of the child are not so distinct. Through the kind invitation of Dr. Bilisoly, we entered his residence to inspect, and from the inside not a trace of the figure was perceptible, the glass containing the figure appearing the cleanest of all others in the sash.

but otherwise free from all flaw or defect. To the ignorant the "appearance," or "ghost," as which is that an old colored woman, a few mornings ago, having on her head a tray containing breaktast for her employer, while lookher fright, and with the exclamation, "Afore God thar it is," took to her heels. The ferry is reaping a rich harvest, the receipts having greatly increased since the appearance of the sensation .- Norfolk Virginian the statement that Mr. Hill, then a Confederate Senator, struck Wm. L. Yancey, the fire-eater, the Confederate Congress, but repeats the story that during a heated debate Hill called Yancey a liar, and the latter sprang forward to strike Hill, who caught Yancey and threw him violentstronger man, and Yancey the more active. In the fall his spine was injured, and he lay un conscious on the floor with blood oczing from his lips. He was taken away, and the mem bers tried to keep the matter secret, and did prevent it being known for six months. Yancey never recovered; he drooped from day to passed quietly and calmly away. Says the American: "He died without a hope of the success of the Southern R public he had aspired to found and govern, and for which he abored night and day for twenty-five years.' There is something strangely sad about this incident, and we would let it bear silent testimony whenever and wherever that testimony should be rendered.'

THE OPEN-COMMUNION QUESTION .- The conference of Baptist ministers of New York and Brooklyn, held at the Oliver street Church on Monday, adopted, after prolonged discussion, a series of resolutions offered by the Rev. Dr. Armitage, including the following: "This conference insists that Gospel baptism is a necessary qualification for the Lord's supper, and disavows communion at the table by any of its members with those who do not possess this qualification." Previously, a motion by the Rev. Dr. Anderson to lay the matter on the table was lost by a vote of 43 to 12. The final vote on the resolutions stood: Yeas, 44; nays, 9; declined to vote, 3. Many of those voting for the resolutions did so under protest, considering it inexpedient to take any action on the matter. The avowals of Rev. Drs. Samson and Bright (the latter editor of the Examiner and Chroni- and retail. cle) that they would be led by comity to ad-minister the elements to unbaptized believers
